Costa Blanca literally means 'White Coast' and refers to over 200 kilometres of Mediterranean coastline of Alicante, Spain. The Costa Blanca has an established tourism industry and is a popular destination for the international community. The region extends from the town of Denia in the north to Pilar De La Horadada in the south and includes other major tourist destinations such as Benidorm, Alicante, Denia, La Zenia, and Javier.

Flights to the Costa Blanca are relatively easy from international airports. The three main Spanish airports for the Costa Blanca are located in Valencia in the north and Alicante and Murcia airports in the south. The region can also be accessed easily via the European high speed railway network links and the coastal motorway network help cater for easy driving access.

The Costa Blanca enjoys a warm Mediterranean climate with long hours of sunshine and relatively low rainfall. August is the hottest month with an
